Strength in Numbers Studios presents Tuebor

LANSING, Michigan – November 11, 2015 – Strength in Numbers Studios, Inc. recently announced they will begin Closed Alpha testing of Tuebor, a 3rd person, RPG, PC game that combines many popular aspects of gaming into one adventure.

Tuebor provides gamers with many new features that aren't typical to most PC video games today. After over 10 years and 600,000 hours of research, S.i.N. Studios has combined features that are well liked from multiple genres into one comprehensive game.

Some of the key features of Tuebor include: all end game content, cross-genre modular map system, unique cyber punk theme, cooperative, PvP/PvEvP gameplay, and a story driven game design.

"Tuebor's design is based off of thousands of hours of game play research, combining elements of multiple genres in a way that would make sense while being fun and interesting for people to play," says S.i.N. Studios CEO, Scott Reschke.

Not only does he have the right research, but he has the right team.

Reschke believes there is an opportunity in Michigan to bring video game development to the economic infrastructure having many talented junior developers coming out of colleges in the mitten state. He adds, "I believe now is the correct time for this studio and this product."

Along with junior developers, the development team is also comprised of AAA studio developers coming from studios like Bethesda, Gentleman Scholar, id Software and Gearbox and having worked on games like Halo, Call of Duty, Borderlands, Fallout New Vegas, and The Walking Dead.

Having the combined talent has helped Tuebor progress and prepare for the Closed Alpha testing, which will be taking place within 6 weeks, as well as the game's launch late spring of 2016.

S.i.N. Studios is currently looking for people to sign up for the Closed Alpha testing of Tuebor. To sign up go to: www.strenghtstudios.org and click "Project Tuebor."
